Hello,

Thank you for the opportunity to read through the multiphthalate document! Overall, I think the sections are well-organized, and except for a few places that I've noted throughout, everything reads really well, the decisions seem generally reasonable and to prescribe approach, and the narrative text is well supported by the associated tables and figures.

Nicely done!

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

As I mentioned in my previous email, I wasn't able to actually leave comments on the document shared via the OneDrive/SharePoint site. So, I downloaded a local version and made comments on that – which is attached.

Thanks,
Jason

Hello,

Thanks Sue. I have already started reading through the document; I tried commenting on the version linked to the sharepoint/onedrive site that Beth sent out, but it restricted me to read-only access, so I've been reading/commenting on a local version. Hopefully I'll be able to get through it and send it to you this week, although things keep popping up to disrupt my plans :)

Thanks for the heads-up,
Jason

Vince and Jason,

Kris met today with Beth and Audrey to provide preliminary comments on the MPD, and to consider whether it makes sense to add the other hazards (e.g., immune, neuro, respiratory) at this point.

Kris offered a number of comments related to organization of the methods materials (essentially recommending that detailed methods be pulled out and moved to a protocol). Given the reorganization, it seemed like it might be worth your waiting for the revised draft before starting your review. So, if you haven't started, you'll probably want to move this MPD lower in your review stack and wait for the revised draft to start your review.

Let us know if you have any questions.

Thanks!

Sue
